FOUR MEN HOLD UP A BANK

HAUL OF ABOUT £600 AT CASTLEPOLLARD

From Our Correspondent.

MULLINGAR, Monday.

MARKET-DAY crowds in Castlepollard, Westmeath, to-day watched an armed man standing at the door of the local branch of the Hibernian Bank, while his three comrades were inside, staging a daring raid.

At about 11 o'clock a covered car bearing a Meath registration number drew up opposite and four men entered the bank premises. One of the men lined the officials against a wall and covered them with a revolver, while another man guarded the approaches to the bank. The remaining three, who were also armed, cleared all the money and returned to the car.

So far it is estimated that £600 was taken. A car was later found abandoned near Oldcastle.

Chief Superintendent McCarthy and Detective Sergeant Carty were quickly on the scene and are investigating the occurrence.

The raid was similar to that carried out on Oldcastle Bank ten miles away two months ago.

JAPAN AND HOLLAND

NO ADVANTAGE IN EAST INDIES

From Reuter's Correspondent.

LONDON, Monday.

Referring to the reply of the Dutch East Indies to the final Japanese Note in the protracted trade negotiations, Batavia Radio to-day reiterated that the giving of any direct or indirect advantage to Germany by the sale of Dutch East Indies products must be avoided at all costs.

"The Japanese Government will, no doubt, take their time in thinking over their reply," said the announcer. "The Netherlands East Indies public know their Government is taking the only possible attitude. Their policy is directed towards friendly relations with our neighbours, but not at any price, and certainly not at the expense of our country."

HITLER IS NOT SEEKING PEACE

INVASION OF U.S. "FANTASTIC"

Press Association.

JERSEY CITY, Monday.

Herr Hitler gave no impression that "he wanted peace or would negotiate for peace," said Mr. John Cudahy, formerly U.S. Ambassador to Belgium, describing here, on his return from Europe, the hour and a half interview he had with the Fuehrer.

Mr. Cudahy, who gained the impression that Hitler and the German people believed the United States would enter the war, said he thought Hitler was sincere in his belief that the invasion "of our continent and hemisphere is fantastic." Hitler's attitude towards him was most unfriendly, Mr. Cudahy said. "He gave me the idea that he did not like me at all because I am an American." If the war was not pushed to a military conclusion by October, Mr. Cudahy added, "I think we are going to have something like a thirty years' war."

FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE SPREADS

Three outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease were confirmed yesterday in Callan district, Co. Kilkenny—one at West Court, one at Killaloe, and one at Ettepeenoe.

The Minister for Agriculture has been requested to receive, towards the end of the present week, a deputation from the cattle trade to discuss the entire position arising out of the continuance of foot-and-mouth disease, according to a statement made yesterday by Mr. P. T. Buckley, Chairman of the Cork United Cattle Traders' Association.

RAILWAYMEN AND TRADE UNION BILL

The National Union of Railwaymen, at a meeting held in Dublin, passed a resolution demanding the withdrawal of the Trade Union Bill and Emergency Order 83 restricting wages. The meeting pledged support to the N.U.R. Executive in any action necessary to defeat both. The resolution called on the Labour movement not to participate in any Government sponsored schemes, and on Deputies Norton and Davin to withdraw from the Defence Council unless the bill and Order are withdrawn.

Press Association.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

The record-breaking $10,009,655,187 (£2,502,413,800) Army Appropriation Bill was passed by the House of Representatives to-day.

The bill contains a provision requiring both employers and employés engaged in defence production to comply with the recommendations of the National Defence Mediation Board.

ADVANCE IN SYRIA

ALLIED THRUST INLAND

French Report Very Heavy Fighting

DRIVING northward up the coast and along a line stretched across Southern Syria, British and de Gaulle troops are continuing their penetration of Syria—"citadel of Egypt."

Last night's communiqué from Cairo General Headquarters discloses that the Allies have advanced beyond Tyre, a coastal town steeped in Biblical history, and have crossed the River Litani, five miles to the North, while inland progress has been made along a line 15 to 20 miles over the Syrian-Transjordan border.

Motorised units, tanks and armoured vehicles, are being supported by the Royal Navy on the left flank, and by the Royal Air Force and the Royal Australian Air Force.

A French official report, broadcast by Lyons radio last night, stated that very heavy fighting is taking place and that the French troops were defending the terrain inch by inch.

COAST TO DESERT LINE

United forces of the British and the De Gaulle movement entering Tyre met with "some opposition" it was learned in London yesterday. From Jerusalem, it is reported, says the Press Association, that the first news from the Syria and Lebanon front is regarded as favourable, and Allied operations, supported by "great activity" in the air, are continuing according to plan. The Allied forces are also said to be employing a good number of tanks and armoured cars on a line extending from the coast to the Syrian desert.

So far as is known in London, Allied troops have also occupied Dera, a small town just over the Syria-Transjordan border, and Merj Iyun, a village on the slopes of Mount Hermon, 30 to 40 miles south-west of Damascus

FOUR-POINT ATTACK

Vichy sources state that the Allies are advancing from four directions—along the coast towards Rayak, the airfield due east of Beirut, from Amman, in Transjordan, and, fourthly, along the Euphrates from Iraq. There is no confirmation in London of another French report that British troops landed on the coast of Lebanon and were all taken prisoner.

The Jerusalem correspondent of the Independent French Agency, quoting "competent circles" there for the favourable view of the first news of the operations, says the Allied forces are supported by numerous aircraft, and that they are motorised and well provided with tanks and armoured cars.

"The De Gaulle forces," the correspondent says, "are led by Brigadier-General Legentilhomme, but General Catroux is believed to be with advanced headquarters."

No big engagements have been reported, he adds.

PUSHING ON

From Cairo the Press Association correspondent describes the entry of Dera as taking place on Sunday morning, and says that following the entry of Tyre in the evening the advance northwards continued. Though it is at present difficult to estimate the extent of French opposition, this correspondent adds, French officials in the country already occupied are co-operating with the Allies.

Another Cairo message reports that 140 German parachutists, including a colonel, have—according to the De Gaulle Radio, Levant—been captured by the Allies.

FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT

Very heavy fighting between French and Allied forces in Syria is mentioned in a communiqué broadcast by the Lyons Radio last night.

In a naval battle off the Lebanese coast a British destroyer is claimed to have been seriously damaged.

The communiqué says:—

"British and French troops which yesterday crossed the Syrian frontier intensified their attacks yesterday afternoon and this morning in the region situated between the Jebel Druse and the fortifications of Mount Hermon. These attacks were made by important forces, including a large proportion of armoured cars. Our advanced units, supported by artillery and aircraft, defended the terrain inch by inch, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. A large number of armoured cars have been destroyed.

"In the coastal region of South Lebanon cavalry and motorised units have been repelled south of the River Litani. Very heavy fighting is in progress on the line Litani-Merj-Iyun-Quinetra-Sheikh-Miskine.

"Single British aircraft continued to bomb the airfields of Aleppo, Rayak and Damascus, as well as the post of Merj Iyun. Our fighters brought down three Hurricanes, and our bomber formations have come into contact with the enemy in local fighting.

"On the Lebanese coast, during an engagement between our naval forces and greatly superior British forces, a British destroyer was seriously damaged.

"At all points our forces, loyal to their military duty, have put up a stubborn resistance to the enemy forces, which are superior in numbers and better equipped."

LITANI RIVER CROSSED

Press Association.

CAIRO, Monday.

The advance of the Allied Forces, consisting of mechanised British, De Gaulle, Australian and Indian troops, northward into Syria, is making progress, according to messages received here to-day.

The news that they have crossed the River Litani has caused satisfaction, as this might have been a serious obstacle. It seems evident that resistance so far must have been slight, though very few details are yet available here as to French reaction, from a political aspect, in Syria.

General Dentz has dissolved all extremist organisations in the country, and confiscated all their property, says the Polish radio.

FRENCH PROTEST

M. Pietri, the French Ambassador in Madrid, has handed to Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Envoy in the Spanish capital, a note from the French Government regarding the "violation of Syrian territory by British Forces." The meeting between the two Ambassadors is said to have been a short one.

The Note has now reached London, and is under consideration, the Press Association learns.

The Vichy News Agency said last night that news of the Allied entry into Syria produced no immediate reaction in Vichy, and there was no meeting of the Cabinet yesterday. Admiral Darlan, however, had a number of direct contacts with high civil and military personalities.

The agency adds that information regarding the military situation remains confused.

Earlier yesterday the Paris Radio stated that the British attack was "particularly violent south of Damascus."

The British concentrated some 150 tanks and armoured cars, the radio added and "our positions remain intact."

FAMOUS CITY OF OLD

Tyre, on the Lebanon coast, in the time of the Phœnicians was the great trading centre of the Eastern Mediterranean, but its former glory has dwindled to an insignificant export trade, mostly in tobacco. Alexander the Great laid siege to it 332 B.C., and after a stubborn resistance for seven months the people of Tyre were overwhelmed; 8,000 citizens were slaughtered, 2,000 executed, and 30,000 sold into slavery.

BRITAIN JUSTIFIED, U.S. SAYS

Press Association.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

"Britain was justified in taking the risk of offending Vichy in order to forestall Hitler, from whom the French Government now openly takes orders," declares the Washington Post. "If ever Nelson's advice, that the boldest measures are safest, were applicable, it is now. The road to Iran and India lies through Syria, and Britain has no option but to take time by the forelock and get athwart it."

French denials that there are German ground troops in Syria are described by the paper as possibly correct.

According to the Dow Jones Washington correspondent, it is learned that the United States State Department and Mr. Cordell Hull warned the French Ambassador yesterday against collaboration with Germany by the French Government. It was in no way clear that such collaboration was confined to Syria, Mr. Hull is stated to have told him.

After his talk with Mr. Hull, M. Haye learned at the State Department that the United States Government found no evidence to warrant a change in its critical view of Franco-German collaboration.

As regards the British attack on Syria, it is pointed out in informed quarters that the French have not defended Syria against the Germans, who are reported to have used it as a base for air operations to help the Iraq rebels.

BERLIN ANGRY

Press Association.

BERLIN, Monday.

Violent abuse of Britain marks the comment of the Berlin evening papers on the Allied move. The writers talk about "Britain's latest pillaging expedition," "A dastardly attack," and "fresh murderous assaults on Britain's former allies."

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung terms the British action "a link in the chain of abominable warlike actions against France," while Nachtausgabe voices the opinion that the "Syrian action should only be regarded as an intermezzo in the present war."

LIVELY FIGHTS, BERLIN SAYS

MUSSOLINI'S VIEW OF THE SITUATION

A German spokesman stated this afternoon, an Associated Press message from Berlin stated last night, that lively fighting was taking place in Southern Syria between Syrian forces and the "English invaders." Whether the Syrians and the forces of the Vichy Government would be adequate to put up an effective defence was a question, the spokesman said, which could not be determined in Berlin.

Germany for the moment, the spokesman went on, was "merely watching political and military developments with intensive interest. There are no German troops in Syria."

AXIS AIMS

A Rome statesman said yesterday that the British "invasion" of Syria opened a new front for the Italian and German forces, who aim at wresting the Suez Canal and the Iraqi oilfields from Britain.

According to the newspaper, Il Piccolo, "Syria will become the new battlefield which England invented only to delay her defeat by several months."

Mussolini, in a statement which appeared in to-day's Pro Armete, the Naval Ministry's official newspaper, declared that the war "has now assumed the character of war between two worlds," and now is at "one of its decisive moments."

It was reported in Vichy yesterday—though without confirmation—that Vichy forces had blown up the coastal road leading from Palestine through Acre and Tyre to Beirut to prevent combined land and sea action south of the mandated territory's capital, says Associated Press.

Vichy admitted that their forces had withdrawn behind Tyre "in order to assume positions along the River Litani against a secondary British attack directed towards Beirut." Authorised sources said the new front line now runs north of Tyre through Sheikh-Miskine-Merj Iyun-Quinetra to Dere, where the principal British effort was being directed against an important railway junction on the main line to Damascus.

"VERY GRAVE"

In Paris one of Admiral Darlan's secretaries, Benoist Mechin, was reported to have described the Syrian situation as "particularly grave." Darlan, who had been planning to go to Paris, has not yet left Vichy. The situation as pictured in Vichy was that fighting was progressing on both banks of Lake Tiberias in the vicinity of Dera, in front of Quinetra—which the Vichy forces were reported to have evacuated—and south of Suweida on the western slopes of the Jebel Druze.

British squadrons were reported to have anchored before Beirut, but had not opened fire. Other British naval units were said to be in position for an attack on Tripoli.

THE COMMUNIQUES

British G.H.Q., Cairo, communiqué yesterday stated:—

"Syria—The penetration of Allied Forces into Syria is progressing. By the morning they were beyond Tyre, and later effected a crossing of the River Litani.

"On the right they have advanced beyond the general line, Ezra-Sheikh-Miskine-Quinetra."

BEIRUT REPORT

The following communiqué was issued in Beirut last night, says Morocco Radio:—

"The British pursued their offensive during the night on land and on sea. Up to this morning the enemy's attack had been held at all points. Counter-attacks were made at certain points and landings were hindered.

"Four British 'planes were brought down. Two of our 'planes have not returned.

"Two British warships have been seriously damaged north of Tyre by a brilliant action by two of our destroyers."

ADVANCE OF 40 MILES

Press Association.

JERUSALEM, Monday.

The Allied advance into Syria since yesterday afternoon has attained an average depth of 35 to 40 miles, a military spokesman stated here to-night. Our forces are encountering scattered centres of resistance.

Allied casualties in the operations have so far been negligible.

DARLAN TALK TO-DAY

BERLIN, Monday.

Admiral Darlan, Vichy Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, is to broadcast all over French radio stations at 9.0 p.m. to-morrow, says a Vichy despatch.

"It is assumed in Vichy political circles that he will make a statement on the position brought about by the British attack on Syria," the despatch adds.—(Press Association.)

"ASSURED OF AIR SUPPORT"

Press Association.

STOCKHOLM, Monday.

The Military Correspondent of Stockholm's Tidningen says to-day that "the next few days will show whether the British hesitated too long" in beginning their operations in Syria. "The British land forces are assured of air support from good bases, including Haifa," he adds. "The British Fleet commanding the seas will bind a portion of the defending forces to the coastal regions."

Colonel Bratt, military expert of Dagens Nyheter, says:—

"If it is true that the Germans are not ready," he writes, "one can suppose that the side which seized the initiative will retain it. But if the Germans allowed the initiative to leave them in Syria, then they are preparing to grasp it in another probably more decisive and more important direction."

IRAQ BREAKS WITH ITALY

Press Association.

VICHY, Monday.

The Iraq Government has broken off diplomatic relations with Italy, says a Baghdad despatch to the Vichy News Agency. All Italians must leave Iraq territory within twenty-four hours.

The "break" is confirmed in authoritative quarters in London.

AIR FIGHTS

GERMAN 'PLANE SEEN TO CRASH

BRITISH FIGHTER MISSING

One ME 109 was brought down on the Dorset coast yesterday afternoon, the pilot being taken prisoner. The raider crashed after an air battle which appeared to be over the Channel.

Residents in a south coast town heard aircraft engines and machine-gun and cannon fire in the direction of the sea. They saw a 'plane approaching from the sea, smoke pouring from it. It fell a mile from the coast in a field near Worth Maltravers.

Later a number of German aircraft which crossed the south coast were dispersed by British fighters. Many people in a southern town heard the noise of the air fight.

A British Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security communiqué last night stated:—

"During daylight to-day there has been some activity over the Straits of Dover and near the coast of Kent, and also over coastal districts in south and south-west England. Up to 8 p.m. no reports had been received of bombs being dropped.

"In engagements with our fighters protecting shipping in the Straits several enemy fighters were seen to be hit and damaged, but owing to poor visability their destruction cannot be confirmed. One of our fighters was lost."

MOONLIGHT RAID ON RUHR

In a moonlight raid on targets in the Ruhr on Sunday night R.A.F. bombers started large fires at Essen and Dortmund, says the Press Association. The raid was heaviest on Dortmund, fires being caused in the town, docks and railways.

An Air Ministry communiqué says: "On Sunday night aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked targets in Western Germany. Though not on a large scale, the operation achieved successful results, especially at Essen and Dortmund, where large fires were started. No aircraft is missing from this operation."

SUNK OFF SCOTTISH COAST

Press Association.

BERLIN, Monday.

Giving details of its claim yesterday that "several large British ocean-going ships off the West coast of Scotland" were sunk, the German News Agency to-day says that German bombers scored several direct hits on a heavily-laden 8,000-ton freighter "in the narrow bay of the Little Minch."

Heavy bombs pierced the deck, causing terrific explosions, and the freighter, also of 8,000 tons, was hit, and sank in similar circumstances. "The explosions completely broke up the ships, from which it may be assumed that they carried munitions."

FUNERAL OF EX-KAISER

From Reuter's Correspondent.

BERLIN, Monday.

World War Generals attended the funeral at Doorn to-day of Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm II., and on Hitler's instructions Dr. Seyss-Inquart, Reich Commissioner for the Netherlands, representing Hitler, laid a wreath on the coffin.

Members of the family already at Doorn were joined to-day by Princess Cecilie, wife of the ex-Crown Prince, with her daughter, Princess Cecilie of Prussia, and her daughter-in-law, Princess Louis Ferdinand, and other relatives.

A guard of honour was formed by German soldiers. The ex-Kaiser's Field-Marshal's batôn was borne by Count Von der Goltz, and his orders and decorations by Count Von Moltke. The Service was conducted by Dr. Doehring, Pastor of Berlin Cathedral.

Field-Marshal Von Mackensen, General Reinhardt, leader of the War Veteran's Association; representatives of the Bulgarian and Hungarian Legations in Berlin, and officials of the house of Hohenzollern were among those who attended.

THREE WARSHIPS LOST AT CRETE

OVER 17,000 TROOPS EVACUATED

AN official British Admiralty communiqué last night states:—

"The Board of Admiralty regrets to announce that the following ships have been lost during the withdrawal of our land forces from Crete:—

"The anti-aircraft cruiser, H.M.S. Calcutta (Captain D. M. Lees, D.S.O., R.N.).

"Destroyers H.M.S. Hereward (Lieutenant W. J. Munn, R.N.) and H.M.S. Imperial (Lieut.-Commander C. A. de W. Kitcat, R.N.).

"The next-of-kin of casualties in H.M.S. Calcutta have been informed, and in the case of H.M.S. Imperial will be informed as soon as possible.

"H.M.S. Hereward was last seen heading towards the coast after having been damaged by enemy air attack. The Italian High Command has announced that 229 survivors from this ship have been landed and are prisoners of war. The next-of-kin will be informed as soon as any further information is available.

"H.M.S. Imperial had to be sunk by our forces after being damaged by enemy air attack.

TAKEN OFF

"The Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, has reported that when the operation of evacuating our forces from Crete was completed just over 17,000 men had been taken off the island.

"The withdrawal of the troops from Crete had to be carried out from places with inadequate port facilities and which were within easy reach of enemy forces.

"The necessity for carrying out embarkation by night meant that each load of men had to be taken the 360 miles to Egypt during the whole 14 hours of daylight. These voyages were carried out in the face of extremely heavy enemy air attack.

"In the circumstances prevailing, it was impossible to assess with accuracy the damage inflicted on enemy aircraft by anti-aircraft gunfire, but it is known that many were destroyed and others damaged.

"Naval aircraft during the operations also shot down four enemy aircraft, possibly destroyed one other and damaged three.

ROYAL MARINES REARGUARD

"During the withdrawal from Suda Bay the Royal Marines formed the rearguard. These men, who had been carrying out various duties, as well as manning the anti-aircraft defences, were hastily formed into an infantry brigade under Major-General E. C. Weston, Royal Marines.

"They fought with great gallantry and proved themselves worthy of the highest traditions of the corps.

"It is known that a number of this brigade were amongst those who had to be left in Crete. The next-of-kin will be informed as soon as possible.

"The following message was sent from General Wavell to General Weston, of the Royal Marines, on the night of May 31: 'You know the heroic effort the Navy has made to rescue you. I hope you will be able to get away most of those who remain, but this is the last night the Navy can come. Please tell those that have to be left that the fight put up against such odds has won the admiration of us all, and every effort to bring them back is being made. General Freyberg has told me how magnificently your marines have fought and of your own grand work. I have heard also of the heroic fight of young Greek soldiers. I send you all my grateful thanks.'"

PREVIOUS LOSSES

Losses previously announced to have been incurred in the battle of Crete (seven ships) were: H.M.S. Gloucester, H.M.S. Fiji and H.M.S. York (cruisers), H.M.S. Juno, H.M.S. Greyhound, H.M.S. Kelly and H.M.S. Kashmir (destroyers).

TOWN-GAS CARS NEED PERMITS

In future vehicles may not be equipped for the use of "town gas" unless a permit has been secured from the Minister for Supplies. As announced in our advertising columns, the Minister has decided to impose restrictions because of the rapid increase in the consumption of gas for propelling motor vehicles. Under a new Order, the Minister's permission is required for the fitting of gas equipment to vehicles, the use of vehicles not registered as gas-equipped vehicles, and the sale of such vehicles. The Order does not apply to producer-gas plants.

FINANCE BILL IN DAIL TO-DAY

The Dail will meet on two days this week—to-day and to-morrow. To-day the Finance Bill, second stage, will occupy most of the time, but, if more time is available, the debate on the Labour Party motion to annul Emergency Order No. 83, which prohibits increases of wages or dividends will be continued. To-morrow evening the new Constitution Amendment Bill will be taken, as arranged, at 7.30.

U.S. ARMY TAKES OVER FACTORY

STRIKERS CLASH WITH POLICE

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

INGLEWOOD, CALIFORNIA, Monday.

MR. ROOSEVELT to-day ordered the United States Army to take over the huge North American Aviation Corporation's factory at Inglewood, California.

The factory holds 196,000,000 dollars (about £78,000,000) worth of contracts for warplanes for the United States Government and Great Britain.

This is the first time that the United States Government has taken such definite action to handle a strike instead of relying on appeals.

Fighting broke out when the factory opened for the normal morning shift. The chief disorders occurred at two of the six main gates, where twenty-five and sixty men, respectively, were involved in mêlées with the police.

'PLANES TAKE PART

The police drove off a party of strikers who attempted to overturn a motor car. Only a few workers entered the factory. Pickets, including a number of women, had assembled outside the factory at an early hour, and when the gates first opened a company official stated: "We want more police protection." Fifty deputy sheriffs, special police and 225 policemen were on duty, while three Army aeroplanes wheeled overhead.

An official of the company declared later: "The situation was very tense." Tear gas bombs broke up the picket lines for a short time, but, after retreating, the pickets returned and reformed the lines. Meanwhile, the police lines formed two roads through which the workers could reach the gates of the factory.

2,000 TROOPS

There were no troops present when the factory re-opened, but it was earlier stated that about 2,000 troops were converging on the city in trucks at dawn. A mass meeting of the strikers had previously adopted a resolution to continue the strike until their demands are met, and condemning the National Union leaders for urging them to return to work.

Mr. Elmer Fretag, whose position is equivalent to the father of a local chapel, is head of the strike negotiating committee. He recently admitted before the Dies Committee in Washington that he registered as a Communist in 1938, but denies that he is now a Communist. Mr. Fretag has made a "no compromise" slogan for the strikers in their demand for higher wages.

11,000 STRIKERS

About 3,000 of the 11,000 strikers yesterday jeered an appeal from Mr. Murray, C.I.O. president, that they should return to work. They also jeered Mr. Richard Frankensteen, head of the United Autoworkers and Aviation Division of the Congress of Industrial Organisations, who had ordered the suspension of all officers of the union taking part in the strike.

TROOPS TAKE OVER

The Under Secretary for War, Mr. Robert Patterson, was directed by the President to "tell the military they should give protection to men returning to work; men leaving work, and also at their homes."

Mr. Stephen Early, in a statement to the Press, said:—"Lieutenant-Colonel Earnshaw reported that about 1,000 workers, with dinner pails, waiting outside the factory were prevented from entering by the pickets. Lieutenant-Colonel Earnshaw expressed the opinion that it was necessary to use the Army, because the situation was beyond the control of the Los Angeles police."

The arrival of the first contingent of troops, in a convoy of fifty trucks, was greeted with cheers by lines of workers standing on the road opposite to the main entrance of the factory.

The disorders ceased as the trucks, filled with soldiers, came up the road. The troops occupied the great factory quietly as if it were a routine manœuvre. Afterwards, Lieutenant-Colonel Earnshaw issued a statement, saying: "Effective immediately. The plant will be opened for work under Government control. Employés desiring to return to their job will be given all the necessary protection."

PRESIDENT'S CALL

In a statement tracing the course of the dispute, the President says: "Mediation has now been interrupted in violation of the agreement entered into by bargaining representatives of the workers to continue production during the course of mediation. A stoppage of production has resulted, and this has created a situation seriously detrimental to the defence of the United States. Because of this situation, as President and Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the United States, I am determined that this plant must be re-opened at once." Mr. Roosevelt then explains that he has directed the Army to take charge till normal production is resumed. "Our country," adds the President, "is in danger. Men and women who are now making aeroplanes play an indispensable part in its defence. I call on the workers to return to their jobs." Mr Roosevelt promises protection for the workers' fundamental rights as free citizens, and says that negotiations will be conducted to reach a fair settlement to the workers and the company, which will be retrospective, to-day.

BAYONETED

The factory was taken over by 3,000 troops with fixed bayonets and carrying machine-guns. The strikers' pickets gradually yielded, but one picket who refused to budge was bayoneted and taken to hospital.

The order to the Army stipulated that its possession of the factory will be terminated "as soon as he has determined that the plant will be privately operated in a manner consistent with the needs of national defence."

The Secretary for War is authorised to employ workmen, as well as a civilian adviser on industrial relations. He will also handle the question of compensation for the company.

GERMAN SUPPLY SHIPS SUNK

Five German ships, intended as supply vessels for the battleship Bismarck and the cruiser Prinz Eugen, and an armed trawler have now been sunk in a big sweep by the British Navy, the British Admiralty stated yesterday.

"As soon as it was known that the Bismarck and Prinz Eugen were endeavouring to break out into the Atlantic it was assumed that their object was an attack on our trade. Such an attack could not be maintained for any considerable time unless replenishments of fuel were available by supply ships.

"Consequently an ocean-wide search by all available cruisers and aircraft-carriers was organised to cover these areas in which these ships were likely to operate. These operations have been successful. In addition to the three supply ships and an armed trawler announced on June 6th as having been sunk, two more enemy supply ships have been intercepted and sunk. The operation of rounding up supply ships is continuing."

TRINITY LAW SITTINGS

U.S.S.R.'S CLAIM TO SHIPS

OF twenty-one appeals listed for hearing by the Supreme Court during the Trinity Law Sittings which will open to-morrow, six concern three Estonian ships and one Latvian ship in Irish ports. Three of these appeals have been carried over from last Term's heavy list, and have been taken by the Union of Soviet Socialistic Republics from orders of the Admiralty Judge giving liberty to the plaintiffs in three summonses to appoint a shipping agent to manage and negotiate in regard to the chartering of the ships Otto, of Parnu; Piret and Mall, of Tallinn, Esthonia, and Ramava, of Riga, Latvia.

The other three appeals are also on behalf of the U.S.S.R., and are from a judgment of the Admiralty Judge dismissing their motion to have set aside proceedings in actions regarding the ownership of the same vessels and the control and operation of another ship, the Everoja, of Riga.

An appeal appears in an action which took several days in the High Court regarding accounts in a bank and a letter of guarantee; another is about the lease of a house and shop and the consideration for the payment of a sum which it was sought to recover; a case is stated by Judge Davitt dealing with an application for a declaration under the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1931; a number of Workmen's Compensation Act appeals, and some new trial motions are included.

SCHOOLBOY'S ACTION

One of the new trial motions is on behalf of a schoolboy, whose action against the manager of a school for damages for injuries was dismissed. The boy, it appeared, had fallen into a grating in the school grounds. The jury found in favour of the manager, and the appeal is on the ground that their verdict was against the evidence and the weight of evidence.

A new trial is being asked in an action of James Gildea, shopkeeper, Corlara, Hillstreet, County Roscommon, against James F. Hipwell, formerly Governor of Sligo Prison, claiming damages for alleged false imprisonment. An order had been made by the Bankruptcy Judge in Dublin committing Gildea for contempt. It had been directed to the Governor of Mountjoy Prison. Meanwhile Gildea had left the country, and on his return he was arrested and detained in Sligo Prison until his release was directed by the High Court after a habeas corpus application.

The motion for a new trial is based on the ground, among others, that the trial judge had misdirected himself in law in not holding that the imprisonment was unlawful.

There is only one reserved judgment to be delivered, and it is in a case stated, which came before the Supreme Court only towards the end of last term. It is the case which raises the question whether or not a bread van is a shop within the meaning of the Shops (Conditions of Employment) Act, 1938.

There are four applications for leave to appeal to come before the Court of Criminal Appeal.

IMPORTANT DUBLIN CASE

In the High Court there is a heavy Chancery list, the actions numbering approximately twenty-five. An important action is in the nature of a test case, and deals with the rights of employés of Dublin Corporation. There are actions concerning railway workers, the abolition of offices, claims to pension rights, shares in companies, and ancient lights. Summonses seek specific performance of agreements, construction of wills, administration of estates; and one action alleges the "passing off" of a commodity.

There are two cases on notice—one of certiorari and one a return to an order of habeas corpus; four cases stated; a Revenue petition, and a Revenue case stated.

One of the cases stated is in a Customs prosecution in regard to the exportation of motor cars; and another raises the question of the legality of offering cattle for sale on the roadway, instead of on the fairgreen, when a cattle and sheep fair was being held at Mullingar.

The jury actions, the trials of which will begin next Monday, numbered thirty-five yesterday. Of that number, 23 are claims for damages for personal injuries; 5 are under the Fatal Injuries Act; four are will suits; 1 is an action for damages for alleged libel, 1 for damages for alleged wrongful dismissal, and 1 is for damages for alleged unisance.

There are twelve non-jury actions, one of them being a matrimonial suit, and one an action for damages for alleged breach of promise of marriage.

GARAGE OWNER FINED £50

PETROL WITHOUT VALID COUPONS

A Dublin garage proprietor, James J. Costello, Merville Garage, Fairview, was fined £50 (payable within one month) and sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment (not to be enforced if he enters into bail to be of good behaviour for two years) when he pleaded guilty, before the Special Criminal Court yesterday, to obtaining 200 gallons of petrol from a wholesaler without tendering the requisite number of valid coupons and selling petrol without obtaining from the purchaser coupons to cover the transaction.

His wife, Bridget Costello, pleaded guilty to selling petrol without obtaining the coupons to cover the transaction, but the Court did not impose a penalty.

Pleas of not guilty were accepted by the State in charges against Costello of conspiracy to forge coupons, forging coupons, and against both Costello and his wife of uttering forged coupons.

Costello, it was stated, bought 2,000 forged coupons for £350 from a man named Delaney. He had used only seventy-five of the coupons.

Mr G. D. Murnaghan (instructed by Mr. James A. Geary, Chief State Solicitor's Office) appeared for the State; Mr. Cecil Lavery, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. James O'Connor and Co.) represented the defendants.

METHODIST CHURCH CONFERENCE

The Rev. Henry Best, Birmingham, President of the Methodist Church, arrives in Dublin to-day to preside at the annual conference of the Methodist Church. Dr. Best intended travelling by 'plane to Belfast last Saturday and then proceed to Dublin. At Liverpool he was informed that he could not go by 'plane, and he returned home. His non-arrival at Belfast gave rise to the report that Dr. Best was missing.

PREVENTION OF INTEMPERANCE

At the monthly meeting of the Irish Association for the Prevention of Intemperance held at their offices, 110 Grafton street, Dublin, Mr. F. T. Eason, Chairman, presiding, a letter was read from the Association's solicitors, Messrs. Kennedy and McGonagle, stating that Judge Davitt had refused an application for a publican's licence. In his judgment the judge mentioned that there were sufficient licensed premises in the district. Satisfaction with the result of this case was expressed, the Association having opposed the application.

In reply to the committee's invitation to the Archbishop of Dublin, Dr. McQuaid, for the inclusion of his name as a vice-president of the Association, His Grace wrote that, as he has already given his patronage to the Pioneer Total Abstinence Association, he regretted he had to decline the honour graciously offered.

NEYLON MEMORIAL PRIZE DEBATE

In the annual debate for the Neylon Memorial Prize by the boys of Xavier School, Donnybrook, the expectations of the extern examiners were exceeded, a very high standard being attained. The essays were assessed by the Rev. John Ryan, S.J., M.A., D.Litt. The chairman of the debate was Mr. John W. O'Connor. The motion: "That the genius of man is best shown in time of war," was lost by a large majority. The final ranking was:—Volunteers—1, C. Crowley; 2, E. Geoghegan. Competitors — 1, D. Costello; 2, H. Drummond; 3, O. Coyle.

SEQUEL TO BORDER SMUGGLING ATTEMPT

A scene between police and civilians, when the latter attempted to force fertilisers over the border into Eire, was described at Strabane Quarter Sessions yesterday, when £18 6s. 8d. was awarded to the Minister for Public Security in Northern Ireland for damage to a Customs patrol car which came into contact with a stone blockade on the road when proceeding to the scene.

Motoring

The Progress of Design

By HAROLD C. BROWN

"ALTHOUGH the doctrine has been accepted in some quarters that the motor car has all but reached finality, a good deal of quiet work is going on with a view to introducing further improvements." A reader left me a Press cutting which began with those words. They appear in The Sphere of May 28, 1910.

Finality of design. How far away is it to-day? The motor car of every half-decade, of every show, one might say, seems to represent the last word in engineering perfection, passenger comfort and artistic appearance; yet, a few years later it will have been succeeded by a number of cars incorporating fresh ideas.

At the same time it must be conceded that the rate of radical change has slowed considerably in recent years. A good car of 1936 or 1937 is not a great deal different from one of most recent production. Many cars of 1930 and 1931 are far from being out-of-date. The truth of the matter is that cars have been so excellent for so long that only small detail improvements from time to time are possible.

Some of the most perfect engineering work is to be found in the cars of the years before 1914. When the Leinster Veteran Car runs were held in Dublin the technical advisers who examined the old machines to see if they conformed to the regulations were amazed at the wonderful pieces of machinery to be found beneath their bonnets, examples of delightful workmanship that seldom is seen in mass-produced motors.

Looking Forward

R. P. HEARNE, the correspondent of The Sphere, told his readers of 1910 that they might confidently expect further improvements. "What the motor car of 50 years hence will be we can hardly imagine, for the whole system of motive power may have been completely altered."

Improvements that he predicted were radical alterations in the system of variable gearing. He foresaw the possibility of interesting developments in the transmission and the braking arrangements. Methods based on the hydraulic system were being studied with particular care, and several remarkable devices were undergoing trial.

"Then, again, the suspension of the frame, the reduction of road shocks and vibration, the design of tyres, the use of automatic engine-starters and of auxiliary engines for pumping the tyres and blowing the horn, and by the installation of electric lighters and heaters, are but a few of the many innovations which may come about, for it is evident that the motor car will go on progressing, and with every new use further alterations may be necessary."

All these improvements duly were made, and many more. The fact that so much that is taken for granted in modern cars had yet to come in 1910 shows how different driving must have been then. Mr. Hearne was an excellent prophet.

After the War

MOTORISTS of the future will, no doubt, experience many bright improvements, the accumulation of which will, in course of time, make motoring of 1941 seem rather old-fashioned and troublesome, though at present it must seem to us that motoring is as perfect as could be desired. We start our engines by pressing a button, we ride at ease, steering is sub-conscious, punctures and breakdowns are so exceptional that they reduce us to tears of annoyance when they do occur, and even then a garage where repairs can be effected usually is near at hand.

Still, the enormous strides in aeroplane design that are taking place under the incentive of war are bound to have an effect upon motor car design in the future. After the war we will have even better engines. When racing is resumed we may expect amazing speeds. The land speed record is bound to go up to 500 m.p.h. The Phœnix Park course eventually may be lapped at 150 m.p.h.

Poetic Parallel

ONE of the most interesting subjects of speculation is the line that body design is likely to take. Occasionally the motoring papers publish sketches by their readers showing machines of extraordinary shape—ideal, perhaps, from an aerodynamic standpoint, but lacking in practical beauty. I cannot resist drawing a parallel between these weird sketches and much of the poetry of to-day. Let me continue the parallel:

The other day I discussed this aerodynamic poetry with Lynn Doyle, whose "Ballygullion Ballads" I would credit with practical beauty. Very patiently he defended the aerodynamic poets. While little that they wrote would live—"perhaps not 10 per cent. of it," he said; "inevitably not .001 per cent. of it," I ventured—he contended that it was contributing something to the perfection of the poetry of the future, just as (he said) cubism, while not itself surviving, had given something to the school of art which followed.

My point is that these pear-shaped cars may never themselves get beyond the drawing board, but they may suggest things to the designers of the bodies that are produced in the future, just as something useful is said to have been helped by cubist art, and something ornamental may be helped by what I have flattered with the description of aerodynamic poetry.

Lionetta May Score at Nottingham

A BIG field of sprinters will contest the Newark Handicap at Nottingham to-day. Humidity is expected to supplement his Pontefract success, and Miss Pinafore, who won at the last meeting here, is sure of a big local following. Booklet is a good-class filly, and others fancied are Kinsman and Sirloin, but I prefer Lionetta, who ran well behind The Pale at Ripon. Selections:—

Clumber Plate—Seven Barrows
Colwick Handicap—Congratulations.
Newark Handicap—Lionetta (nap).
Sherwood Plate—Melfish.
Fillies Plate—Congo.
June Handicap—Meantime.

Double—Lionetta and Congratulations.

SOCIETIES' CUP AT DUN LAOGHAIRE

Twenty-four Societies, each represented by three foursomes, competed in the qualifying round for the United Association's Cup at Dun Laoghaire yesterday. The two best nett scores of each counted, and eight Societies enter the match play stages at the Castle next Monday. Much of the scoring was rather low for foursome play, and a lot the reverse, the latter due to slackness on the slow, but true, greens. Munster and Leinster Bank topped the aggregates with the very excellent score of 135, due in large measure to a remarkable 63½ by P. G. McGrath and J. F. Donnelly, playing off a combined handicap of 13½. Bank of Ireland also did uncommonly well with 136½, their leading pair being F. J. Fitzgerald and J. D. Rooney with 66½ off 16½.

Useful Total by Trinity

After a slow start, Dublin University put up the useful total of 229 for 8 wickets against Mr. D. R. Pigot's XI. in the College Park yesterday, and declared at the tea interval. In the hour and a half before the close the scratch side scored 73 for 3 in reply, and are 156 behind.

With the wicket and outfield very slow in the morning, Moynan and Jacobson were cautious against accurate bowling by Mara, Ingram and Hill, but in the afternoon Luce gave a grand display of driving on both sides of the wicket. Both he and Barnes hit Ingram for six, and in two successive overs 20 runs were taken off the slow bowler. Pigot started confidently when his side went in to bat, but he was out to a brilliant catch by Shrago at mid-off, and Murray and Burrowes also went before the close. Ingram and McVeagh will resume the innings at 11.30 this morning. Score:

Draw for Saturday's Red Cross Event

The men's singles contest at Fitzwilliam on Saturday next, organised by the Dublin clubs, who have postponed the League matches arranged for that date, is the outstanding event of the present season, not only because it is a special effort to raise funds for the Irish Red Cross, but because the form which the competition will take is unique in contests between players of the highest class.

The eight players have been divided into two sections of four each. The sections will be played off on the American system, each tie consisting of nine games, and the player winning the highest total number of games in Section "A" will contest the final (one set) against the corresponding winner of Section "B." The sections have been drawn as follows:—Section "A"—Egan, Ryan, Murphy, and Haughton. Section "B"—Kamp, Fannin, Read, and McArdle.

The first round of four ties will begin at 2.30, the second round at 3.30, and the third round at 4.30, all the matches being played consecutively on the centre court. Before the final, which is timed for 6 p.m., a woman's doubles of one set will be played between Misses D. Curley and B. Lombard versus Misses O. Poole and M. Nicholls, who are the four highest ranked Irish players.

LONDON

MINING SHARES MOVE AHEAD

LIVELY DEALINGS IN FAR WESTERN RAND

Rich strike announced during the week-end by the Blyvooruitzicht Gold Mining Co. was the chief topic of conversation on the London Stock markets yesterday, and, amid lively dealings, several of the Far Western Rand shares moved ahead smartly. Blyvoors, after initial hesitation, went up from 14/9 to 15/6; while Ventersposts spurted to 29/4½ and West Wits. put on no less than 6/3 to 73/9. The West Wit. Co. has a big interest in Blyvoors and has large adjoining properties.

Other sections of markets derived encouragement from the latest Syrian developments, and with Gilt-edged securities setting a good example, several sections exhibited a firm tendency, though actual demand was again centred mainly on selected issues. British Government securities were pointed upwards from the outset, and, under the influence of well-distributed investment inquiry on a fairly brisk scale, the principal stocks were able to register some appreciable improvements on balance. Conversion 3½ p.c. gained ⁵⁄₁₆ to 104⁷⁄₁₆, Old Consols and Locals both put on ¼, and Old War Loan added ³⁄₁₆ to 103½.

In the Foreign section, Brazilian 20-Year and 40-Year issues were favoured, the former at 46 and the latter at 33½.

British Rails were scarcely affected by the rise in Gilts, and in quiet conditions most issues were kept at their previous closing rates. Exceptionally, L.M.S. Ord. managed to close a shade gain, a fraction to 12. Conversely, Great Western Ord. eased ¼ to 32.

Among Industrials, "Emmies" showed up well at 9/9, and quiet support was evident for Dunlops, Chemicals and Molasses around their previous closing rates. Cable Ord., after being dealt in up to 67 in anticipation of the dividend announcement, fell back to 66¼, whilst Stores and Tobaccos remained out of favour and finished lower in places. Steel shares had few changes of importance, and Shipping and Motor issues were subdued, with Austins a dull spot among the latter. Breweries were noteworthy for quiet activity in Guinness £1 units up to 71/-.

Business in Mines was confined largely to the Far Western Rand issues, and, apart from the gains mentioned above, little of interest transpired in the Kaffir sections. Rhodesians were barely mentioned and in lifeless conditions West Africans showed little alteration. In the Oil section, Shells were quoted 40/- ex div., whilst Anglo-Mexicans and Leaseholds found buyers at 26/3 and 70/- respectively.

Burmahs also went ahead, and Canadian Eagles hardened to 8/4½.

WALL STREET VERY FIRM

New York stock prices held near best, but variations were very small yesterday. However, the market was generally fractionally higher on reports of initial successes in Syria, and owing to the Government's firm hand in the West Coast strike. The turnover of 440,000 shares comprised 695 issues, of which 393 advanced, 123 declined, and 179 were unchanged. The opening was narrowly firm, but trading was hesitant. Holding its fractional gains, however, the market turned very firm, but quiet, during the morning.

The close was very firm.—(Reuter.)

WOOL

BRADFORD.—Recent developments have cut down total production of wool goods to about half of what it was a year ago. Competition is keen for any new business on offer, without making much difference to prices. Raw material costs are fixed, and cost of production is on up-grade.

DUBLIN

GUINNESS ORD. SUPPORTED

ADVANCE IN BOLANDS ORD.

The accumulation of week-end orders on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday was not large, and markets consequently presented a quiet appearance. Gilt-edged issues were in demand, but Railways showed little life, and the tendency looked easier. Irish Industrials met with small demand in places, and marked small gains.

The Second National Loan declined to 114, but 4 per cent. Conversion Loan advanced to 109¼, and other issues were well maintained. British Funds displayed firmness, and 3½ per cent. War Loan closed 5/- higher at 103½. Corporation issues, where dealt in, showed no change.

Banks were moderately busy, and the tone was steady. There was good local support for Guinness units, and they finished several pence higher at 70s. 9d. Dublin Distillers A recovered to 5/-.

In a small Railway market Great Southern Gtd. relapsed 15/- to 28¾. Dublin Transport Ord. were harder at around 13s. 1½d. Alliance Gas Ord. continued dull on renewed nervous liquidation, and they shaded off to 17/6. Bolands Ord. were in good demand, and advanced 1/- to 122/6, while a few other local Industrials were dealt in at generally steady levels.

B.A.T. Ord. more than recovered the deduction of the dividend at 81/6 x.d., but Imperial Tobaccos advised lower at around 91/9. Textiles showed a better trend in nominal markings. Imperial Chemical Ord. eased to 30/6, and Vickers Ord. to 14/9.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING—9th JUNE, 1941

Extracts from statement made by the Chairman, COLONEL LIONEL H. HANBURY.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.
New Life Assurances were completed during 1940 for a net amount of £824,000, being approximately 60 per cent. of the figure for the previous year. Sums amounting to £32,000 have been paid in respect of war deaths, but the claims experience for the year has proved slightly more favourable than that "expected," according to the mortality table used in the valuation.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.
There has been a reduction in the premium income in this account. The balance transferred to profit and loss is £45,000, compared with £114,000 in 1939.

ACCIDENT AND GENERAL DEPARTMENT.
In this account also there has been a loss of income which amounted to about 6 per cent. of the figure for the previous year. The transfer to profit and loss is over £97,000.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.
The premium income for the year amounted to £393,000, as compared with £308,000 in the previous year. After writing off £98,000 in respect of balances due and providing £36,000 for taxation, the sum of £25,000 has been transferred to profit and loss, still leaving a considerable balance of profit in the fund.

VALUE OF INVESTMENTS.
The Stock Exchange securities have been valued at their middle market prices at 31st December last, less accrued interest. In the Life Assurance Fund the total market values so calculated were about £85,000 below the book values and an addition of this amount has been made to the existing Reserve Fund of £80,000. In the General Fund the total book values were below the aggregate market values.

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT AND APPROPRIATION.
£14,000 has been appropriated to write off mortgage securities, £15,000 transferred to the Staff Pensions Fund, and £25,000 applied to increase the General Reserve to £1,900,000.
A dividend was declared of 11/- on each Ordinary Share, leaving a balance to be carried forward of £129,000—greater by £12,000 than the amount brought forward from the previous year.

GAS EQUIPPED VEHICLES.

The Minister for Supplies has made an Order entitled the Emergency Powers (Gas Equipped Vehicles) Order, 1941, restricting the further fitting on motor vehicles of equipment for the use of gas not generated on the vehicle. Copies of the Order will be on sale as soon as possible.

This Order places no restriction on the use of a vehicle which was on or before the 9th June, 1941, fitted with such equipment, provided it is registered in the Register of Gas Equipped Vehicles to be kept by the Minister. Applications for registration should be made in writing to the Secretary, Department of Supplies, Earlsfort terrace, Dublin, not later than the 13th June, 1941, and should be accompanied by the Registration Book relating to the vehicle and a statement as to the date on which the vehicle was equipped for the use of Gas and the name and address of the firm by whom the equipment was fitted. In addition, a certificate from the Garda Siochana that the vehicle is fitted with such equipment should be submitted. This certificate may be obtained by presenting the vehicle at any of the following Garda Stations:—

Dublin County Borough.	Carriage Office, College Station, Pearse street.
Cork County Borough.	Union Quay Station.
Limerick County Borough.	William Street Station.

Elsewhere—Any Garda Station.

Under the Order equipment for the use of gas not generated on the vehicle may not henceforth be fitted on any vehicle unless a permit is first obtained from the Minister.

The Order prohibits the driving on or after the 21st June, 1941, of vehicles propelled by means of Gas not generated on the vehicle, unless such vehicle is registered in the Register.

The Order also prohibits the sale of vehicles so equipped without the consent of the Minister.

EMERGENCY POWERS (CONTROL OF PRICES) (No. 84) ORDER, 1941.

RETAIL PRICES OF TEA.

The Minister for Supplies has made an Order under the Emergency Powers Order, 1939, which limits the margin of gross profit on tea to be taken by retailers to a sum not exceeding six pence per lb. Under the terms of this Order the prices to be charged by retailers must not exceed the wholesale price of the tea, together with a sum not exceeding six pence per lb.

Copies of the Order will be on sale shortly.

It should be emphasised that prices calculated in accordance with the Order are maximum prices. It has been the custom of certain wholesale firms, selling packet teas, to fix retail prices for these teas, and these retail prices should be maintained so long as the firms concerned continue to make supplies of tea available.

In the case of any overcharging or suspected overcharging for tea, consumers are requested to communicate with the Department of Supplies, so that complaints can be investigated and legal proceedings for any breach of the Order instituted.

JOHN LEYDON,
Secretary.

RED CROSS CONCERT

ENJOYABLE FUNCTION

The Keating Branch of the Gaelic League presented a most enjoyable concert at the Aberdeen Hall, Gresham Hotel, Dublin, last night in aid of the Irish Red Cross Society, and the only regret was that the audience was not twice as large. The programme was well varied, opening with part songs by the branch choir, under the baton of Proinnsias O Ceallaigh. The choral work was excellent, especially in the setting of E. O Gallcobhair's Fairy Reel.

The branch string orchestra played attractively Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Percy Grainger's arrangement of "Molly on the Shore," and a group by Hamilton Harty, E. O Gallcobhair and C. Hardebeck.

There was some artistic solo singing by Michael O'Higgins, Maire Ni Scolaidhe, Brighid Ni Choiligh, Sean O Siothchain, Tomas O Suilleabhain, and Tomas Roseingrave.

The playing of Hugh Maguire, the thirteen years old boy who won such prominence at the recent Feis Ceoil, aroused keen interest. Accompanied on the piano by his elder brother, he played with careful precision Esposito's "Coulin" and Dvorak's "Humoresque."

Mr. Frank Fahy, Speaker of the Dail, in a brief speech, thanked all who gave their help to the Red Cross Society. If there had been any doubts as to the need for such a society, they had, unfortunately, been dispelled by the recent bombing in Dublin. When peace came, and he hoped it would come soon, there would still be important work which the Red Cross Society could do. He appealed for support for the Society during their "drive" this week.

Government and People

The Minister for Supplies stood up stoutly for his Government at a Fianna Fail meeting in Dublin last night. Its social policy in time of peace, he declared, had been to lighten the burden of the under-dog—"to improve the living conditions of those at the lower end of the scale"; in time of war it was fundamentally the same. To support this thesis, he spoke briefly of the various social services which it had created, or enlarged, from its accession to power until the declaration of war, and he talked at length of the measures which it is pursuing to-day for the prevention of distress—such measures as rationing, price control, and the "stand-still" Orders in regard to wages and dividends. It was a good defence so far as it went. It showed that, while the Government had some of the right ideas, it had not enough of them, either now or in the past. It was an excellent résumé of the Government's objects, but it failed to show how far the Government had attained them. For ourselves, we believe that Mr. de Valera's Government, which erred on the side of boldness during its first few years of office, has been erring on the side of timorousness since the war began. It has been trying to cope with problems as they arise when it ought to have been anticipating them. This is no time for hand-to-mouth measures. It is no longer a matter of adding a shilling or so a week to this or that allowance, while the number of recipients of allowances is permitted to grow daily. Many thousands of men have lost their employment through no fault of the Government; hundreds of thousands of people are worse off than they were—many of them, very much worse off—for the simple reason that a war is raging within a few miles of our shores, and that, likewise, is no fault of the Government. Our criticism of the Government is that, while recognising the changed conditions of to-day, and while doing its best to alleviate the immediate distress of the worst sufferers, it is manifestly bereft of any sort of "plan"—the word is not a good one, but must serve—to cope with the new conditions. It continues to employ the methods that served in peace-time; it has not broadened its vision to any appreciable extent. The whole course of the war abroad has shown that unorthodox strategies stand the best chance of success; and we believe that the Government ought to apply the same lesson to its handling of Ireland's domestic problems.

Years have passed since the Government, and the country at large, began to worry about unemployment. There is vastly greater cause for alarm to-day; and there will be even more when the war ends and the men who have gone to jobs in Great Britain return. Yet nothing is being done about it. Larger scales of relief do not meet the case: the necessity is work, and work is not being provided. The feeling is growing that Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly's recent Budget ought to have announced the floating of a substantial loan—at any rate, of £20,000,000—which would enable the Government, under intelligent advice, to provide work and sustenance on a scale proportionate to the country's necessities. We say "under intelligent advice," because it is clear that the requisite intelligence does not exist within the Government's own ranks: witness the ignoble career of Mr. Hugo Flinn's Unemployment Works Committee. We are told that it is impossible to put forty thousand men to work on the bogs, desperate as the country's need of fuel may be: they would not go, they would ask too much in wages, they would need special accommodation. Let the wages be paid; let the accommodation be provided, and we are satisfied that the men will go. Would it not be better to raise a loan and spend the money so, rather than keep forty thousand men in idleness? Is Ireland so well equipped with roads, with drainage schemes, with sewerage, with forests, that there is no room for the employment of men on the provision of these things? In a small way, appropriate to their tiny resources, some dozens of parish committees are contriving to harness energy in a manner that the Government, left to itself, never could have contemplated; to take an example from the city, the Rathmines Parish Council feeds some hundreds of people every day at a ridiculously low price—and, even if it does not make money, does not lose any. Surely the Government could accomplish on a large scale what the parish committees are accomplishing on their own small scale. We are optimistic enough to believe that a real spirit of co-operation could make this country a better-fed and better-provided place, even in time of war, than it ever was in time of peace; but a lead must come from the Government. It must be prepared to finance, on a large scale, experiments which have been successful on a small scale; it must be ready to encourage, by every means in its power, the spirit of self-help and co-operation, rather than to depress it.

The Middle East

Beyond the general statement that the British and de Gaullist forces are making progress, there is little fresh news from Syria. It seems that the allied invasion is following four main lines—the first along the coast, where communications are good; the second towards Rayak, the airfield east of Beirut; the third from Transjordan, and the fourth along the River Euphrates from Iraq. Reports from French sources speak of heavy fighting, giving the impression that the French garrisons in Syria are offering serious resistance to the invaders, whereas no information in this regard is forthcoming from the British. It seems to be fairly well established that General Wilson's advance has been maintained at a steady pace since the frontier was crossed on Sunday morning. The famous port of Tyre has been captured, and it is reported that the River Leontes has been crossed. The British and de Gaullist armies are said to be well equipped with motorised units, as well as with light tanks, whereas, according to statements from Vichy, the French in Syria are at a serious disadvantage in this respect. So far as we can understand the situation, it is a matter not so much of armaments as of moral. Are the French in Syria in sympathy with the British cause, or are they not? Everything seems to depend on the answer to this question. When General de Gaulle, with the help of the British Admiralty, arrived off Dakar, on the west coast of Africa, he quickly discovered that the local garrison was not prepared to surrender without a fight, and, rather than spill French blood, he withdrew from the scene. What is the position in Syria and the Lebanon? General Catroux has promised the Syrians and Lebanese that the French mandate will be abolished, and that Syria and the Lebanon will become sovereign States with rights defined by treaty. Naturally enough, this promise must appeal to the Arabs, who never have been happy under French rule, and have not yet forgotten the French attack on Damascus shortly after the last war. Whether or not they will attach any particular importance to General Catroux's promise remains to be seen; but, in the case of Arab tribes, the devil they do not know very often is believed to be better than the devil they do know, and it is quite likely that the invading troops will receive a certain amount of help from the natives. The position in the Djebel Druse country cannot be estimated with any degree of accuracy at present. The Druses have been in a condition of more or less open revolt against the French for many years, just as, indeed, they would be in a state of revolt against anybody who might try to govern them. Doubtless, they will welcome the chance to assert their rather aggressive individuality, and it is highly improbable that the invading forces will meet with much opposition from them. The attitude of the white French troops is uncertain. They are torn between two loyalties. They are loyal Frenchmen, but they hate the Germans. The senior officers, no doubt, being first and foremost soldiers, will obey orders from their Government at Vichy; but some of the younger men, for whom the names of officers such as Catroux, Legentilhomme and Collet have an almost legendary quality, may be tempted to follow the lead of General de Gaulle. Be that as it may, the British and de Gaullist leaders declare that their object is to gain control of Syria and the Lebanon with the minimum amount of bloodshed. They insist that they have no desire to take Frenchmen's lives, but that they are determined to prevent the Germans from gaining a foothold on Syrian or Lebanese territory. Their excuse for the invasion of Syria is identical with that which was advanced by the Germans thirteen months ago for the invasion of Norway; but in this war excuses do not matter. What do matter are accomplished facts, and in this case the fact is that Syria and the Lebanon have been invaded by British and de Gaullist forces in formidable strength. It seems to be more than likely that they will be able to overcome any resistance which may be offered to them by the French and native garrisons. The unknown factor in the equation is the attitude that will be adopted by the Germans. Until that is known all speculation regarding the immediate future in the Middle East must be futile.

The Bibber's Lot

By all accounts, life will soon become slightly more complicated for those who are partial to an occasional "jar," not, strangely enough, in Ireland—where up till a few weeks ago everybody imagined that the Budget would make the price of alcoholic beverages prohibitive—but in Great Britain and America. In one issue of the Daily Telegraph, almost side by side, are two reports which undoubtedly will come as bad tidings to the bibulous members of the community. The first report deals with gin and whiskey, which, it is stated, is shortly to rise to a retail price of 17s. a bottle for whiskey and 16s. 6d. a bottle for gin. The second report states that Lord Woolton, the British Minister for Food, hinted in a recent speech that there shortly would be another 10 per cent. cut in the amount of cereals allowed for the manufacture of beer. Earlier in the year a voluntary reduction of 10 per cent. was made at Lord Woolton's request, but it was possible to make this former cut without reducing the actual amount of beer produced by the elimination of several of the stronger beers and by the reduction of the specific gravity of the others. It is doubtful, however, whether it will be possible to make another cut in the same way, and the manufacturers fear that the amount of beer produced will have to suffer a decrease. In America matters are even more serious, although there is no actual shortage of alcoholic beverages. At a meeting of the Massachusetts Medical Society it was revealed that electricity recently has been used experimentally in order to "shock" certain chronic drinkers into freedom from the habit. The report goes on to say that the method is comparable to the use of metrazaol and insulin "shock" treatments, which have been used in mental cases; and, although the system is still in its infancy, already it has achieved remarkable results. The heavy drinkers in this part of the world must feel distinctly uncomfortable since this report has appeared; for they never will be sure whether or not their friends and relations intend to try and "shock" them out of their bad habits, and many of them must feel that it would take a lethal dose to be really effective. Not only the male drinkers, but also women who frequent bars, have come under the disapproving eye of authority in America. According to a report from Chicago, Alderman Jim McDermott is shortly to move a by-law prohibiting the sale of alcohol to women in bars unless they are seated at a table. This by-law, however, is not an attempt to cure women of the habit of drinking by easy stages, but rather to make the bars more comfortable for the men. "A man cannot find elbow-room at a bar because of the women," he said, and he feels that this by-law should meet the case.

SAVAGES DESCEND ON CITIZENS

HUMOURS OF TRINITY "RAG"

The three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Trinity College, Dublin, was celebrated by the usual "Rag," which, after the announcement of the new scholars from the steps of the examination hall, is the principal feature of Trinity Monday.

The Front Square was crowded with undergraduates and members of the public, who had come to see the fun, and, after numerous false starts—or what were thought to be false starts—the procession made its way out of the front gate, and then dispersed itself around the streets, to the accompaniment of squibs, cat-calls, and conflicting noises made on "musical" instruments.

Although there did not appear to be any central idea binding the "Rag" together, many of the undergraduates were influenced by current events in their choice of attire, and other costumes, while humorous, seemed to bear no relation to anything but the whim of their wearers. Several scantily-garbed "savages," in full war paint, capered about the streets, blowing trumpets, and a youth, wearing a demure gingham frock and ankle socks, spent his day riding round the town on a minute tricycle, accompanied by a young man, clad in a sailor suit, riding a similar vehicle.

Several students formed a band supporting the Red Cross Appeal for Clothing, and there was the usual number of "ballet girls," Spanish caballeros, Eastern dignitaries and "hockey girls."

Alderman Alfred Byrne, T.D.; Mr. D. Rushton and Professor T. Rudmose Brown, who watched the "Rag" from the steps of the dining hall, awarded first prize to the group of "savages" already referred to, and "Secret Weapon No. 1."

The proceeds of the "Rag" will benefit the Red Cross, the Mount Street Club Turf-cutting Camp, and a scheme for providing comforts for children.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

EXPECTATION is general that Mr. Churchill, when replying to the discussion on Crete in the House of Commons, will have something of the highest interest to say. Everybody is hoping that he will be as frank as possible about recent events, and, since he is Defence Minister, he will be in a position to tell Parliament much that is at present unknown. Nobody can expect him to be answerable for all the details of happenings in work that often has to be carried through without reference to, or immediate guidance from, London. It is expected that the discussion will be initiated by Mr. Lees Smith, the Leader of the Opposition, but it is rumoured that Mr. Hore-Belisha intends to play a big part as an ex-Secretary for War. It is not unlikely that the debate may continue for two days, but this is in the hands of the Government.

Raid Damage

The Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor of London, suffered rather severely during a recent raid, nearly all the windows being smashed, while the famous Egyptian Hall, the scene of so many festivities, was strewn with wreckage, and its magnificent, great stained-glass windows at either end were destroyed. The great crystal chandeliers in the reception rooms also were destroyed; otherwise the damage done was superficial, and the building was uninjured. Next to the Mansion House stood one of the most interesting churches in London—St. Stephen's, Walbrook—and for hours the Mansion House officials fought to save it, but in vain, and it was destroyed. The building was looked upon as one of Wren's finest efforts, and believed to have been his model for St. Paul's. Much of the beautiful Gibbons carving and other ornaments were saved by the workers. The Guildhall has been again damaged by explosive bombs and further portions rendered unusable.

Compulsory Insurance

The life of an official valuer of land and property must be a very busy one at present, since the demand for services in connection with compulsory insurance is very heavy in all directions. The public seem to be very ignorant regarding this insurance, particularly as to whether property should be valued on the pre-war standard or on present inflated values. This applies to the householder, who realises that any replacement of goods and furniture is likely to cost him far more than it did in pre-war days. The extension of time allowed by the authorities for would-be insurers is proving all too short, and it is possible that there will be a call for a further space.

Cigarette Hoarding

The cigarette famine in London continues and the Tobacco Controller is probably correct in his assertion that it is largely due to people buying more than they need and saving for the future. The tobacconists have been endeavouring to deal with this by confining their sales to their regular customers, much to the indignation of the hoarders. The retail trade is within its rights, however, when it refuses to sell to people it does not know, and it is recommended to ration supplies, giving first consideration to regular customers. It seems that there is no shortage, if Egyptian or Turkish cigarettes are required. The demand is for the Virginian variety, and any other is refused.

Blinded Soldiers

The Dominion Governments have appointed St. Dunstan's their agents for the education and training of overseas troops who are blinded in Britain or evacuated there from other places. Arrangements have been made for Dominion men who have been evacuated to South Africa to remain there, and a special hospital is to be opened for the accommodation of any such men. A big consignment of apparatus, including Braille watches, elementary exercises in Braille reading, and typewriters specially adapted for use by the blind, has been sent out to the Cape, where the work will be organised by Mrs. Chadwick Bates, who was the first secretary to St. Dunstan's here, working with Sir Arthur Pearson, when the place was first founded. She has been in South Africa for eleven years as organiser of the South African St. Dunstan's Committee.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

A Continental Cafe!

I meant to tell this earlier. It happened on the day of the bomb explosions in Dublin.

At a public-house by the corner of Summerhill the windows had gone, and the front was littered with broken débris. But there—on Saturday afternoon—the regulars had gathered round the counter for the usual pint.

It was a hot day, and the absence of windows made for comfort. The place had the appearance of one of those open-air Continental cafés.

This Dublin scene evoked a faint—very faint—memory of pre-war Paris, where I have so often eaten, not to say drunk, in public. There nobody took any notice of drinkers or diners. But here urchins peered in curiously, and the men at the bar looked queerly self-conscious.

The landlord felt it was not right, either; for he hurriedly ordered glass, and two men arrived carrying the panes, stepping on the broken glass and rubble around the old windows. Those which they could not fix up at once they boarded up, and Dublin citizens were saved from the ordeal of a comfortable Continental habit.

'Killaloe"

Who was the author of the comic song entitled "Killaloe"? You remember the jingle which told of the adventures of a French Musoo who endeavoured to instruct the populace of that famous town in the 'game of parley voo'":—

> "When a fellow down from Clare
> Heard his Mother called a 'Mere'
> Faith he gave Musoo his fist between the eyes. . ."

I am prompted to ask the question now, because in the course of a recent "question time" from Radio Eireann it was attributed to Percy French. I doubted the accuracy of this; for in my mind the authorship was associated with another writer of comic verse.

To test the matter I questioned a number of people, and was surprised, and more than half convinced, by the unanimity with which all of them agreed with the radio compère. One friend, however, was able to set all doubts at rest by producing the printed text and music with the writer's name on the cover.

The name was not Percy French, but the late Robert Martin, who also wrote the equally popular songs about "Ballyhooley" and "Enniscorthy."

French was the last man in the world who would desire to annex credit for another's work, and for that reason I think right to correct what appears to be a very common misapprehension.

"Abdul the Bulbul Ameer"

Yet, while Percy French was satisfied to take what reputation and reward were coming to him from his own work, it is not generally known that he was himself the victim of the plagiarist and the pirate.

How many people know that he was the writer of the ballad called "Abdul the Bulbul Ameer," which is often heard over the radio as sung by Frank Crummet and others?

French has himself put on record the fact that it was written by him during his time as a student of engineering in Trinity College. It described a duel between a Turk and a Russian during the Russo-Turkish War, and was so popular at College smokers that he decided to publish it. Two hundred copies were printed, to be sold at 1s. 6d. each. It was wealth untold, and, as he says himself, El Dorado seemed just round the corner.

He omitted, however, to copyright it, and a London publisher, seeing this, brought out a pirated edition which had not even French's name on the cover. Not only so, but the pirate actually copyrighted his version, and so French was tricked out of all rights in the song.

"I am relating all this," French wrote, "because the song has had a considerable vogue, and I have heard various people mentioned as the author."

Questions

While on the subject, I understand that adaptations of Radio Eireann's "Question Time" feature already have been heard in British broadcasting programmes. Private question times have become the most popular of round or parlour games, and, publicly, there was the inter banks' question time competition, with its final broadcast.

A few weeks ago the Dublin and District Motor Cycle Club held a question time, with motor-cycle sport as its subject matter, and to-morrow evening, 11th June, they are to have another, with motor car sport this time supplying the problems. The conductor of the proceedings will be the motoring correspondent of this paper.

With no petrol available for competitions, the Dublin Club, at its Exchequer street headquarters, endeavours to keep the spirit of the sport alive even with indoor competitions. To these it invites members of other clubs and riders who belong to no clubs at all.

Prizes

A friend handed me a book of tickets to sell. Of course, the cause was deserving and the prizes good—first prize, twenty pounds, and a list of smaller prizes.

"Buy a ticket?" I asked someone.

He looked at them. "Prizes no good," he said.

"How's that?" I said. "Twenty pounds no good to you?"

"Oh, it's all right," he replied. "But I know a fellow has tickets, and the first prize is a ten-stone bag of best quality flour."

"And the second prize?"

"Four-stone bag of onions and three pounds of tea. How can you compete against that with a paltry twenty pounds?"

OVERSEAS CHOIR

GUESTS OF ROTARY CLUB

The twenty-four members of the Overseas Choir, conducted by Mr. Philip Moddel, and organised by Mrs. W. H. Lamb, were the guests of the Dublin Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon at the Gresham Hotel yesterday. The majority of the members are University students, and are drawn from all parts of the world. They specialise in the singing of musical arrangements of international folk songs, and it was from their repertoire of these that they presented selections yesterday.

A letter from the Belfast Rotary Club, expressing the hope that neither the business premises nor the private residences of Dublin Rotarians were damaged in the recent Dublin bombing, and sympathising with those who had suffered, was read.

A vote of thanks to the Overseas Choir was proposed by Mr. W. B. Conyngham, and was passed with acclamation.

A RECORD OF 350 YEARS

TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN

BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

> "We perceive that the Major and the Cittizens of Dublin are very well disposed to grant the site of the Abbey of Allhallows, belonging to the said City to the yearly value of twenty pounds to serve for a colledge for learning, where knowledge and Civility might be increased by the instruction of our people there . . . ."

"IS this city here because Trinity College is here, or is Trinity College here just because the city happened to be here?"

I don't know whether the man was answering his own question or that of his friend's finger as it pointed to the two dates, 1591-1941, which were in the scroll under the front page of yesterday's Trinity Parade, published in connection with yesterday's T.C.D. Rag Day and commemorating Trinity Week. But the worst of it all was that poor Oliver Goldsmith could not answer; for, as I turned around and watched that bulbous-browned bronze figure against that time-worn façade, his slow, sad smile seemed to broaden, and the pen seemed to move as it poised over his tablet—poor Oliver, who in his maladjusted life behind those walls so personified the very best of Quixotic Trinity. Oliver, who "wrote like an angel and talked like poor Poll," in the irony of things now guarding the gates of Alma Mater beside Edmund, who talked like an angel and didn't have to bother about writing, while a vortex of present-day Trinity students swirled up and down College Green in celebration of the College's 350th anniversary.

OLIVER'S VIEWS

What Oliver would have written on this occasion anent the above quotation from Queen Elizabeth's letter regarding the birth of a sister to England's two universities is as unpredictable as Oliver was himself; but certain it is that Trinity itself has in that epitome of accomplishment now marked by its anniversary commemoration written for itself a story known to the ends of earth, a story which centres largely around the alumni who have taken such a prominent part in the progress and culture of those 350 years.

To look at Trinity, with the mind confronted with the problem of doing a sudden newspaper assignment about the College and its anniversary, is to see a bomb explode and then try to pick up the fragments while they are still red hot and hammer them into the desired editorial shape; for so kaleidoscopic is Trinity in its literary colour, that any one of its multiplicity of scintillant facets is enough to blurr the typewriter keys.

TRINITY CHARACTERS

Take some of the Trinity characters at random. For instance: Charles Lever, blowing up the age-old college pump; Edward Ford, a Junior Fellow, getting shot to death in Trinity's one and only murder, by five students, all of whom were acquitted, in 1730; Booth, who was publicly whipped in the Hall for stealing, killing and guzzling Sir Samuel Smith's pig, in 1629; Theodore Barber, who was expelled for drinking to the memory of the horse from which King William was thrown, in 1711; picturesque young Sir Springham, who used to keep a hawk, in 1629—characters all.

But there were other famed students of a different, more serious type, personalities whose memory will outlive those aforementioned "characters": students like Robert, youngest of Trinity's three Emmet brothers; balladist Tom Moore, a less heroic contemporary of Robert's, but still to many all over the world identified with Ireland; Theobald Wolfe Tone, of storied '98 memory, leader of the ill-starred Hoche expedition; John Kells Ingram, who wrote undying "Who Fears to Speak of '98"; Grattan, Hussey Burgh of the Irish Parliament; Thomas Davis, inspirer of the Young Ireland Movement; Isaac Butt, who launched the phrase "Home Rule"; Eire's President, Douglas Hyde, founder of the Gaelic League, a contemporary in Trinity with poet T. W. Rolleston, and others who did so much in the revival of Irish literature. The 172-year old College Historical Society, oldest University Debating Society in the world, which was founded by Edmund Burke, in 1747, includes many another illustrious name. These last are the Trinity students Ireland knows best, reveres most. They dedicated their lives to shaping Ireland: those other Trinity men merely helped to shape the whole world: George Berkeley, the philosopher; Edmund Burke, the statesman; W. E. H. Lecky, Elizabethan historian. Dean Swift did not have to shape anything but his own immortal saeva indignatio.

But this is just a newspaper piece, not a book, and so to a brief history. This here Insula Sanctorum Scholarum needed a University. Queen Bess agreed, but kept a fairly tight hold of her purse in doing so. Her father, Henry VIII., had suppressed All Hallowes monastery, and that came in handy now. Dublin Corporation gave twenty-eight acres of derelict land and the necessary sum for repairing the ruined abbey and for what new buildings were required. Trinity College opened, with Archbishop Loftus, who helped to found it, as its first Provost.

Early in the seventeenth century the fortunes of the University advanced rapidly, James I. having granted to it a pension of £400 per annum and endowed it with extensive tracts of Ulster land. In 1613 he further conferred on Trinity the privilege of returning two members to Parliament. By 1630, the accommodation being inadequate, the building of new colleges commenced. About 1637 the whole allowance of a scholar, both out of the kitchen and buttery, was 2s. 2½d. per week, or £5 15s. 11d. per annum, for the seventy scholars, according to Provost Temple's estimate.

Most of the lads were then much younger than to-day's undergraduates, but they seemed to have been much fiercer, and old college records prove that same, evidently with great gusto.

BARRACKS AND PRISON

Cromwell's advent did not help Trinity, as rents were not paid. But on the arrival of King James II. in Dublin things looked brighter—for a while. Then he seized the college and turned it into a combined barracks and prison. Later, however, he appointed as Provost a Catholic clergyman, named Moore, who, after the Battle of the Boyne, went to France and became teacher and associate of Boileau and a host of the most brilliant literary figures of the Louis Quatorze period.

William III. having triumphed, Trinity was restored to its pristine position, and during the eighteenth century several grants for building purposes were made to the college by the Irish Parliament. The building of the Library Square took place in 1700. The Library itself, which was built in the oldest part of the college, started in 1712, and was completed in 1733. By 1750 the front of the college consisted of twelve low, fragile brick houses. With the building of the Examination Hall, in 1787, the college really began to take shape.

Magnificent as are those dignified buildings, which give the college such an impressive architectural unity, as they stand brooding on the past at various respectful distances around Lord John Beresford's lofty £12,000 campanile, Trinity actually is still more a state of mind than it is mere geography, for Trinity is as boundless as the genius that has made its fame.

RATIONING WHEN NECESSARY

MR. LEMASS ON VALUE OF PRICE-CONTROL

THE social policy of the Government in pre-war years and their social policy in present circumstances were outlined by Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Supplies, in an address on "Some Present-day Problems," which he delivered at a meeting arranged by the Dublin City constituencies of Fianna Fail in the Central Hotel, Dublin, last night.

The primary aim of their social policy in time of peace had been, he said, to improve the living conditions of those at the lower end of the scale, to assist out of the resources of the whole community those who could not maintain themselves in frugal sufficiency out of their own resources, to raise the average standard of living by eliminating the extremes of poverty which might arise from unemployment, incapacity, old age, or other unavoidable cause. In times of war their aim fundamentally must be the same, the fixing of a lowest level of means, below which nobody would be allowed to fall, by adopting the provisions of their various social service schemes to meet the situation created by difficulties of supply and rising prices.

INCREASED BENEFITS

The most important of the methods by which they must strive to deal with the position in which they now found themselves and serve the requirements of social justice, even if that position should further deteriorate in the future, were the increasing of the benefits provided under social services schemes for necessitous families; the rationing of essential commodities in short supply to secure equitable distribution; the strict control of prices of essential goods to eliminate avoidable increases; and the restricting of any increase in the incomes of families (not in need of assistance from the social services), either by the imposition of higher income taxes, or otherwise by preventing uncontrolled increases in profits, salaries and wage rates. It was along those lines that the Government were proceeding.

The increase in the provisions made for those assisted by public social services which the Government had proposed was not necessarily the final or only change of that character to be made to meet conditions created by the war.

FOOD CHEQUES

The Government had decided that the increased provision should, where possible, be given in the form of food cheques. It would be a much simpler procedure to grant the increased provision in cash, but the position already had arisen in respect of some commodities that cash alone might not secure supplies, and that situation might develop extensively.

It frequently had been urged that the rationing of all foodstuffs and other essentials should be immediately instituted here. The attitude of the Government was that rationing should be resorted to, apart from industrial raw materials, only in respect of commodities of general consumption which were, or might become, in short supply. It saw no reason to regulate the distribution of goods of which there was not now or any immediate danger of future scarcity. It saw many positive difficulties in, and objections to, the institution of flat-rate rationing schemes in respect of classes of goods which, even if scarce, were not of general consumption.

RATIONING

The Government would resort to rationing in respect of every commodity, and on every occasion when the public interest appeared to require it; but, if other methods of regulation appeared to be more effective in their circumstances, then they would be chosen in preference.

The disbelief in the effectiveness of their price-control system arose mainly from the fact that, despite it, many prices had risen. The popular opinion was that the purpose of control was to prevent all increases in price, whereas its real purpose was to prevent only such increases as were avoidable. It was inevitable that under war conditions the prices of some commodities must increase. Despite a most rigid system of control, the price of coal had, for example, risen steeply. That increase was due entirely to an increase in the pit-head prices charged to them in Great Britain, and a further increase in transport costs from that country. They could do nothing about it. There was no alternative source of supply. They must pay the prices demanded or go without. Similarly, commodities imported from overseas, or made from or with the aid of commodities from overseas, were bound to increase in price.

BREAD AND MILK

There had been no change in the price of bread for over twelve months; the price of milk was the same now as it was twelve months ago; the price of butter had increased by 1d. per lb., due solely to a decision of the Government to give the farmers who supplied milk to creameries an average price of 6d. per gallon, the previous price being uneconomic in view of increased costs of production; margarine had increased by 1d. per lb. also. The raw materials for margarine manufacture were all imported, and an even greater increase might have been anticipated.

The price of sugar was the same as it was twelve months ago; the price of oatmeal and lard had been decreased since that time last year, the former by 1½d. per stone and the latter by ½d. per lb.; the price of condensed milk was unchanged; the price of jam had risen by ½d. per lb., due to the higher cost of sugar, and, in the case of tea, a standard profit margin for retailers had been fixed and it was the same as pre-war.

MEAT AND VEGETABLES

Probably all the talk about higher food prices was occasioned by the prices of meat and vegetables. The retail prices of fresh meats were controlled by his department, and allowed no undue profit to traders. Those prices were fixed in relation to the prices of animals, and the prices of animals were not subject to control by his department. His department, which had been investigating a number of complaints relating to prices of vegetables had not found that the prices complained of had been due in any of the cases examined to excessive profit-taking by the traders concerned.

It was the intention to extend the system of maximum price orders to the widest number of commodities, in relation to which it was a practicable method of control. Because of the work done by the Price Control section of his department he could say with confidence that profiteering, in the accepted sense of that term, did not exist in any widespread degree in this country.

DIVIDENDS AND WAGES

Turning to the recent Order placing restrictions on increases in dividends, salaries and wages in certain occupations, Mr. Lemass said that the action that the Government had taken was in the interests of the workers alone, particularly those sections of workers whose employment in present circumstances was becoming insecure, and to whom the fear of unemployment was a much greater reality than the remote prospect of a rise in wages. The "stand-still" Order would be retained only for so long as it was considered absolutely necessary. It could, and would be, modified if the situation should require it, or if the policy which it represented became impossible to maintain.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mr Lemass, on the motion of Mr. John McCann, T.D., seconded by Senator D. Healy.

Senator Miss Margaret Pearse presided.

MR. RUTTLEDGE AND TURF-CUTTING

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LISTOWEL, Monday.

Fuel was the most urgent problem confronting the country at the moment, as there was very little likelihood in the present war circumstances of being able to import their requirements, said Mr. P. J. Ruttledge Minister for Local Government, speaking to-day at a luncheon in Listowel, where he performed the ceremony of opening the new District Hospital.

It was more than probable, said Mr. Ruttledge, that in the coming winter they would be thrown back completely on their own resources. He relied on Kerry to give wholehearted co-operation in this matter of fuel production. He knew they had already that co-operation from the officials and public men of the county, and he trusted that the workers would also co-operate in seeing that they were able to meet the particular situation with which they would be confronted. In the matter of food production, the Minister said, Kerry was somewhat akin to his own county—Mayo—where farms were comparatively small, and where they never had very much difficulty in providing the necessary food. It was in the counties where the farms were big that the difficulties of production were met with.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"AN UNFORTUNATE VOTE"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—A person signing his name as "C. Stack," and giving Trinity College as his address, but whose name I have not been able to discover in the College Calendar, has accused me of "whitewashing Synod hall" and of "suppressio veri" in my quotation from the prayer for the "Parliaments in Ireland." He has also questioned whether the Standing Committee of the General Synod inquired into a matter referred to them by the Synod, and has specifically stated that "they did not report to Synod."

The Standing Committee of the General Synod did inquire into the matter referred to them; they did report to the Synod; their report was presented to the Synod, and was adopted by the Synod on May 11, 1939.

The words quoted by me were taken verbatim et literatim from the "Prayer for the King and Commonwealth," the alternative prayer which "may be said instead of the Prayers for the King's Majesty, for the Royal Family, for the Chief Governors in Ireland, and for the High Court of Parliament and the Parliaments in Ireland."

In the prayer which I quoted the Parliaments are not referred to as "under Our Sovereign Lord . . . . assembled"; and the words, quoted by me, "and all who are set in authority," demonstrate to anyone who has looked at the prayer book and is not determined to misrepresent the facts, the source from which my quotation was derived.

I refuse to be drawn into further controversy on this subject.—Yours, etc.,

GERALD FITZGIBBON.

L.S.F. UNEMPLOYED

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Unemployed members of the L.S.F. were on duty for long periods in the bombed areas of Dublin. The only time they asked off was for the purpose of signing at the Labour Exchange.

I feel sure that contractors and those responsible for clearing and reconstruction in those areas will not fail to give first preference when labour is being engaged to unemployed members of the L.S.F., A.R.P., and other services concerned.—Yours, etc.,

DIED ON RETURN TO HOSPITAL

An inquest, held yesterday by Dr. J. P. Brennan, County Coroner, and a jury, at St. Michael's Hospital, Dun Laoghaire, was adjourned for further medical evidence in view of the circumstances attending the death of William Davis (68), a labourer, 40 Cumberland street, Dun Laoghaire.

The evidence showed that Davis fell from a plank when distempering a ceiling in the "breadroom" of the Dun Laoghaire Branch of Messrs. Bolands Bakery, on May 28th. He sustained an injury to the head, and was taken to hospital.

Dr. J. Maher, house physician, stated that Davis was admitted suffering from concussion, but was quite conscious and showed no signs of serious injury. He was discharged from hospital and he returned on 7th June almost in a state of coma, and died next morning. A post-mortem examination showed that he had sustained fracture of the back of the skull. Dr. Maher said that, in his opinion, death was due to meningitis, which could be associated with the fracture, and added that while in the hospital Davis had shown no evidence of the fracture.

In reply to Mr. Roger Greene, solicitor for the next-of-kin, witness said that Davis was examined on his re-admission to the hospital, but had no sign of fracture.

In reply to Mr. E A. Plunkett (Messrs. J. J. MacDonald), representing Messrs. Bolands, Ltd., Dr. Maher said that meningitis could develop in any time up to ten days after a fracture.

Dr. M. O'Connor, house surgeon, said that Davis had been walking about the hospital and had not made any complaint.

Motorist Fined £33.—Vincent P. Mullan, Fyhan, Dungannon, was, at Dungannon Petty Sessions yesterday, fined £10 and costs on each of three charges—viz., assaulting a police constable, failing to stop his motor car when requested to do so, and for reckless driving. He was also fined £3 and costs for employing an uninsured driver. William P. Keogh, Donaghmore, was fined £3 and costs for using the car while not insured.

"PRIVATE LIVES" AT GAIETY

For the opening of their season at the Gaiety Stanley Illsley and Leo McCabe chose the amusing Noel Coward comedy, "Private Lives," which was such a success when they presented it at the Peacock some time ago. Two divorcees, Amanda and Elyot, meet after five years—on the evening of honeymoons with their respective second choices; what happens then is worth seeing. The plot is fully expounded by the end of Act 1, but the fun goes on in the briskest of dialogue. It is an extremely difficult play to put across successfully, and the main rôles demand a high degree of skill. Fortunately, Shelah Richards and Stanley Illsley have the necessary experience to play out the duologue of the second act rapidly and well, bringing out the laugh-lines sufficiently to keep the audience enjoying the show and not realising that the action is at a virtual standstill. From the playwright's point of view "Private Lives" is very interesting; from the player's, very difficult; and, from the audience's, very amusing.

Leo McCabe and Eithne Dunne—the latter was not in the cast at the Peacock—play up well in the minor rôles of the "second choices," and keep the pace nicely; Mairin Hayes, the maid, has a tiny part, but her acting is irreproachable.

The season of Messrs. Illsley and McCabe has opened well, and it should prove both enjoyable and interesting.

OLYMPIA

There is a "two houses nightly" show for this week at Olympia, Dublin. While attractive and varied programmes like that of "A Musical Round Up" occupy its stage, the Olympia is sure of full houses. The programme is led by Gerry McDevitt's Accordeon Band of 16 performers, and the fun makers are Toddy Kenny, Nolan and Tyrrell, with Vie Kaye, Norma Barry, and Crosby and Hogan supplying capital vocal and instrumental items. Pretty dances were expertly performed by the Barry Olympia ballet team.

THE ROYAL

The Theatre Royal orchestra give an unusually attractive presentation as their particular contribution to the features which make up the capital programme arranged for this week's entertainment.

The "Five Arizonians" carry one delightfully into the musical heart of the Wild West, and, in their singing and playing, reveal a very pleasant side of cowboy life. Chris Bruton, the well-known comedian, proved his merit last night and evoked warm applause. The Swiss Bellringers, together with Fred Doyle, Eileen Keegan and the Royal Violettes, as well as Jack Cheatle, all in turn kept the audience enthusiastic and fully entertained. Several pleasing selections on the organ by A. Gordon Spicer went to make up a very enjoyable show, completed by the film, "East of the River," starring John Garfield and Brenda Marshall in thrilling incidents and romance.

QUEEN'S

The Queen's Theatre management have made no mistake in retaining Ernie Murray's "Holiday Revels" for a second week's run. This fact was proved by its reception last night. Jimmy Harvey is, of course, the chief fun-maker in this bright and diverting revue, and was capably supported by Mick Eustace and Bill Brady, while Liam O'Connor diversified the interest with his renderings of ballads. Josephine O'Hagan, Patty Ryan and Joan Reddin were responsible for entertaining vocal items, and the Moonbeams troupe gave picturesque dancing displays. The film programme was an interesting one, including "Meet the Missus" and "The Ghost of St. Michael's."

T.C.D. ASSOCIATION

The annual general meeting of the Trinity College (Dublin) Association took place yesterday, Dr. E. H. Alton, S.F., T.C.D., in the chair.

The Hon. Secretary (Dr. K. C. Bailey) presented his report on the work of the year. This stated that in present circumstances the maintenance of a normal programme was not possible, and the association aimed only at preserving its existence until better times. Last year, for the first time for many years no Association dinner was held in Dublin.

During the year 132 new members were enrolled, 66 died, and there was a net increase of 66 for the year, with a total membership on 30th April of 5,397.

The members whose deaths have been recorded include many who played a great part in the history of the College and of the Association. Dr. E. J. Gwynn was Honorary Secretary from 1926 to 1927 of the Organising Committee which laboured for several years prior to the inauguration of the Association in 1928, and only handed the work over to the present Hon. Secretary when his appointment as Provost made it impossible for him to continue. For the rest of his life he was one of their keenest members. They had suffered another heavy loss in the death of Dr. James Bell, a Trustee and member of the Standing Committee.

Women members would feel particularly the deaths of Miss Margaret Cunningham, for many years Warden of Trinity Hall; Mrs. Luce, President of the Women Graduates' Association, and Miss Eileen McCutcheon, who had left her property for the use of the College.

Other distinguished members who died during the year included Sir Michael Fenton, Mr. John Garvey, Sir George Grierson, Mr. Andrew Jameson, Sir W. H. H. Vincent and Mr. A. E. Dowds.

Mr. F. La T. Godfrey has taken the place of Dr. James Bell as one of the Trustees.

The Hon. Treasurer (Captain Ramsden) reported that the financial condition of the Association was satisfactory.

The usual Committees were elected, and a vote of thanks was passed to the Hon. Auditor (Mr. C. B. Kennedy).

Crushed to Death.—The jury, at an inquest held yesterday in Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital, Dublin, returned a verdict that Patrick Malone (19), 41 Poolbeg street, had died from shock and hæmorrhage, caused by being crushed between a partition and a crane taking turf from a canal boat on the 6th June at Hanover quay, and added the rider that in their opinion sufficient precautions had not been taken in operating the crane.

MISS ANNE GREGORY

ONE of Ireland's most beautiful and most popular sportswomen, Miss Gregory loves the open-air life. One time a keen follower of "The Galway Blazers," she was also master of the "West Waterford's"; an accomplished dancer is Miss Gregory, and extremely popular in social circles. She is the daughter of the late Major Robert Gregory and granddaughter of the late Lady Gregory, the distinguished author, playwright and one of the founders of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin.

Miss Gregory is blonde with lovely eyes of blue. Her complexion is flawless, and for this she pays tribute to Pond's—she writes: "I think Pond's creams are wonderful; wherever I go they go with me. They are the only beauty treatment I bother about, and certainly they do all you claim for them and more. I recommend with confidence both Pond's Vanishing and Pond's Cold Cream."

Blackheads, skin blemishes, roughness soon disappear under treatment from Pond's wonderful cream. Underskin nourishment is established and soon youthful healthy skin gives you the glow and bloom inseparable from beauty. There is no make-up that can compare with natural beauty, so take the advice and follow the example of beautiful women everywhere and make Pond's your passport to beauty.

He was educated at Clongowes Wood College, which he captained in his last school year. He entered Trinity College in 1921 with a Junior Exhibition, and in 1923 entered the Medical School, and became first Scholar in Experimental Science while still pursuing his medical studies. In 1925 he was elected to a Begley Studentship, and in the same year he graduated with a First Class Moderatorship (First Place) and Large Gold Medal in Natural Science, his subjects being Pathology, Bacteriology and Chemistry. He was appointed to a Research Scholarship in Bacteriology and took his M.Sc. Degree in 1926. In 1927 he qualified M.B., B.Ch. and B.A.O., and was awarded the Haughton Medal and Prize for Clinical Medicine in Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital. He also won the Reuben Harvey Memorial Prize, awarded by the Royal College of Physicians for the best piece of original work submitted by a student or recent graduate. He became a Licentiate and Member of the Royal College of Physicians of Ireland in 1928, and next year obtained the Diploma in Public Health with Honours and First Place. In 1931 the Degree of M.D. stip. cond. was conferred upon him, and in the same year he was elected to the Fellowship of the Royal College of Physicians in Ireland. In 1935 he was awarded the Degree of Sc.D. for his published scientific work, and also obtained the Madden Prize at the Fellowship Examination in Trinity College, his subjects being Physiology, Biochemistry and Biophysics.

It is more especially in connection with his recent work on diphtheria, carried out with a grant from the Medical Research Council of Ireland in Trinity College, Dublin, that Dr. O'Meara has been awarded the Fellowship of Trinity College without examination, on the grounds of distinguished merit. This work has enabled a new concept of the nature of the toxæmia of diphtheria to be developed. Six months after his return to Ireland he began to investigate the nature of the hypertoxic form of diphtheria which so frequently occurs in Dublin. Its existence had previously been noted in Berlin, Leeds, Bucharest and many other places, and it was known to respond very poorly to ordinary commercial antitoxin, even when the latter was administered in enormous doses. By the autumn of 1939 Dr. O'Meara had been able to show that the poison or toxin of the diphtheria bacillus was composed of two parts, and was not a single entity, as had previously been held. In the development of antitoxin for treatment the power of the antitoxin to neutralise the more important of the two constituents of the toxin had been neglected, hence its inability to succeed in the treatment of severe cases of diphtheria. In order to enable clinical trials to be carried out in Dublin, Dr. O'Meara entered into an agreement with the Medical Research Council of Ireland and a firm engaged in the manufacture of antitoxin, whereby the latter would have the benefit of one year's knowledge of the work prior to its publication in return for a supply of antitoxin for clinical trial. A small quantity of antitoxin prepared according to Dr. O'Meara's prescription became available for clinical trial by Dr. McSweeney in Cork Street Fever Hospital, and met with complete success, a success which Dr. O'Meara had predicted to the Medical Research Council of Ireland before the serum was used. Dr. O'Meara is continuing his researches into the composition of toxins and antitoxins.

In 1930 Dr. O'Meara married Miss Margaretta Neary, formerly of Newry, who, up to her recent untimely death, was a constant source of inspiration and encouragement to him in his work.

DR. SAMUEL WINTER

A PROVOST OF T.C.D.

Samuel Winter, D.D. (1603-1666), Provost of Trinity College, Dublin, was the subject of an address given by the Ven. Archdeacon Seymour, Litt.D., at the usual Commemoration Service which was held yesterday in the College Chapel.

Born in Warwickshire, Dr. Winter was a Scholar at Cambridge University, said Archdeacon Seymour, and he is described by biographers as having "attained to a great measure of knowledge both in the Tongues and the Arts, and also in Divinity." He became Vicar of Boston, leaving this in 1633 for New England in search of greater religious liberty.

He came to Ireland in 1651 as one of four Commissioners sent by the British Government, and Archdeacon Seymour divided his work in Ireland into two sections—his work in connection with the College and his efforts to promote religion. Early in this year Winters was actually styled Provost, although his formal appointment did not come until the following year, when Oliver Cromwell made him "Provost and Master for and during his natural life, or for or during such time as he shall well and faithfully behave in the said place and trust."

He is said to have helped poor scholars, and given large sums of money out of his own pocket towards the furnishing of the library with books. He devoted much attention to the financial question, continued Archdeacon Seymour, and did much to increase the rents and revenues.

Dr. Winter did a great deal of travelling on behalf of the College, and on these tours he performed many baptisms and marriages.

Archdeacon Seymour described Dr. Winter as a bitter opponent of Anabaptism, and in 1656 he published a book maintaining the doctrine of infant baptism, a copy of this being in the College library. In 1652 Dr. Winter and six other Dublin ministers were ordered to consider the best course to be adopted for the effectual preaching of the Gospel in Ireland, and ministers had to be passed as suitable by a body of ministers and laymen, of which Winters seemed to have been the unofficial chairman. Later on this body was known as the Committee for Approbation of Ministers.

In 1658 Oliver Cromwell died, and in 1659 Winter was ordered to return to England to await the pleasure of the English Parliament. It is not known whether he went or not, but in 1660 he was ordered by the General Convention to deliver up the original charter. This was obviously an attempt to get rid of him, and his last act in connection with the institution was to remit some Commencement fees, and with that he disappeared as Provost, presumably because he would not take the Provost oath. He returned to England to reside near Coventry, where he died.

CONSTRUCTION CORPS WORK DECLINED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

CORK, Monday.

The Acting Superintendent Home Assistance Officer reported at to-day's meeting of the South Cork Board of Public Assistance that the Government had made employment available for single-bodied men by way of the Construction Corps. A number of the men had refused to accept this proposal, and consequently unemployment assistance was suspended.

Mr. M. J. Corry, T.D., criticising the Cork City Manager and Mr. Hugo Flinn, Parliamentary Secretary, said that in Cove the people obtained tents, and within three days had men cutting turf. Surely the City Manager and Corporation could have done something similar. Mr. Corry opposed granting home assistance, but finally withdrew his opposition, and it was agreed to allow home assistance in necessitous cases. He intimated that at the next meeting he would oppose any further assistance to these men.

DUBLIN FREE MILK SCHEME

GRANT OF £30,000 INADEQUATE

The annual report of the Infant Aid Society, submitted at the general meeting last night in Castle street, Dublin, stated that owing to the rise in the price of milk and the increase in unemployment, with its consequent increase in applicants for free milk, the Society found the annual grant of £30,000 inadequate, and also hard to meet the demands made upon its resources. During the past twelve months 2,172,384 pints were distributed for the benefit of children under five years of age. This milk was produced from tuberculin-tested herds, which are subjected to inspection by the veterinary inspectors of the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

Over 4,600 families were visited each month by members of the Society, and during the year 1,435 garments were distributed to the mothers of newly-born infants.

Proposing the re-election of the Committee, Alderman A. Byrne, T.D., said that the only way to get the grant under the National Free Milk Scheme increased was for every member of that Society to write to their public representatives telling them that the Society was short of milk, and asking him what he was going to do about it.

Councillor Mrs. Cosgrave said that one of the most remarkable features of the Society was the work of voluntary helpers.

The Chairman, Dr. Reginald J. White, paid a tribute to the dairymen, who had continued to supply them with milk in spite of the foot-and-mouth disease.

The motion that the Society was worthy of support was proposed by the Rev. F. J. Tarpey, C.C., seconded by Mr. C. Lawless, and supported by Mrs. Falvey.

FOR TO-DAY—
A BEAUTY TREATMENT AS PURE AS A DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION

THERE IS no complexion can hold a candle to the Irish girl's—and to-day, when smart women everywhere are trying to achieve the new, more natural type of loveliness, you come into your own! Do take the utmost care of your skin. Don't bury it under pore-clogging make-up. By day as well as by night, use a beauty preparation which will benefit and purify your complexion all the time.

Non-stop Beauty Culture

A 24-hour beauty treatment sounds a tall order till you know about Lacto-Calamine, which is so pure and of such recognized medical constituents that you might almost call it a doctor's beauty prescription. Calamine is the safest and gentlest possible substance for use on the skin. It is constantly prescribed by the medical profession for delicate skins and for clearing up minor skin blemishes. Crookes' Lacto-Calamine contains Calamine in its purest form.

Beauty Calamine is Lacto-Calamine

Lacto-Calamine is prepared by a colloidal process in which the particles reach a state of ultra-microscopic fineness attained by few beauty preparations. Afterwards scientifically combined with nourishing, emollient milk of almonds and soothing witch hazel, Lacto-Calamine is delicately soft and creamy, in a skilfully blending skin tone.

• • •

TWIN-PURPOSE. Let Lacto-Calamine look after your skin beauty day and night. It may be used as a powder base, but many people consider it unnecessary to powder over its lovely matt bloom. Last thing at night, smooth in its gentle milkiness. No more unflattering stickiness—your skin completely absorbs Lacto-Calamine.

Through the microscope

MONDAY A micro-photograph showing a section of the skin of a girl's face, magnified 104 times, before application of Lacto-Calamine. Neglect had caused skin-roughness which appears as ridges.

WEDNESDAY The same skin after two nights and one day of using Lacto-Calamine. Look at the micro-photograph now. It records no unevenness of the skin's surface, which is now fine and smooth.
